

UK's 'knee-jerk' Red List temporary ban throws South African travellers into a muddle

By Victoria O'Regan 26 Nov 2021

Britain announced on Thursday that it would be temporarily halting flights from South Africa and some neighbouring countries owing to the threat of the new Covid-19 variant B.1.1.529, leaving travellers in a state of disarray.

Travel agencies and industry associations have criticised the country's decision to put South Africa back on its Covid-19 Red List as a "knee-jerk" reaction with a "domino effect", as other countries follow suit.

While South Africa has raised concerns about the UK government's decision, a National Coronavirus Command Council (NCCC) meeting scheduled for Sunday, may provide some clarity.
