

Congo demands $17bn more in infrastructure investments from China deal

By Stanis Bujakera and Sonia Rolley

17 Feb 2023

Congo's state auditor has demanded an additional $17bn of investments from a 2008 infrastructure-for-minerals deal with Chinese investors that is currently being renegotiated, documents seen by Reuters on Thursday, 16 February, showed.

A copper and cobalt mine run by Sicomines is seen in Kolwezi, DRC. Source:Reuters/Aaron Ross

President Felix Tshisekedi's government has been revisiting the deal struck by his predecessor Joseph Kabila under which Sinohydro Corp and China Railway Group Limited agreed to build roads and hospitals in exchange for a 68% stake in Sicomines, a cobalt and copper joint venture with Congo's state mining company Gecamines.

Under the Sicomines deal, the Chinese investors committed to spending $3bn on infrastructure projects, but the state auditor - Inspection Generale des Finances (IGF) - demanded that commitment be increased to $20bn, to reflect the value of the mining concessions that Gecamines contributed to the deal.

Congo recovers mining and oil assets from Israeli billionaire

Stanis Bujakera 28 Feb 2022

$822m spent on infrastructure so far

A Sicomines official did not immediately reply to a request for comment. He has previously defended the deal, saying it had driven development for Congo's people and that Sicomines would invest more as production increased.

So far, Sicomines has only spent $822m on infrastructure investments, according to the IGF report seen by Reuters. The auditor also called for an "immediate" $1bn investment from Sicomines, and a commitment to 50% of the workforce on infrastructure projects being Congolese.

Renegotiation of the convention

Among a list of 16 demands, the IGF called for the "renegotiation of the Convention to adjust and balance the duties and benefits of both parties and bring them into line with the value of their respective contributions".

The auditor also demanded that Gecamines be given a bigger stake in Sicominex. It currently has a 32% holding.

Congo's finance minister Nicolas Kazadi told Reuters last month that the government expects to reach an agreement on the Sicominex deal this year.

For more, visit: <https://www.bizcommunity.com>