This issue examines the emotional appeal of stunning photography, addressing how it can be utilised to successfully market luxury homes in various mediums, including print, social media and online platforms.

The magazine also showcases an impressive selection of extraordinary properties from around the globe, including the celebrity homes of actor Mark Wahlberg, former Major League Baseball pitcher John Smoltz, film director Joel Schumacher and designer Nate Berkus.

Readers also will preview three remarkable private islands and an extensive selection of over a hundred luxury homes throughout the world. In addition, the magazine offers the latest luxury trends and tips from notable designers and an article examining the pioneering architects who became known for their contemporary design as The New York Five.

Affluent consumers the target market

The magazine is distributed to affluent consumers through Luxury Portfolio's network in more than 30 countries and is sold on newsstands in over 50 countries. It also will be distributed at the International Symposium hosted by Luxury Portfolio International in Lisbon, Portugal this October.

"While we market over 250 000 extraordinary homes on LuxuryPortfolio.com, we still believe strongly in the appeal of a beautifully produced magazine," notes President of Luxury Portfolio International Paul Boomsma. "By incorporating the highest quality photography, a compelling glimpse into noteworthy homes, and unique design tips, the magazine presents a different type of experience whether viewed online or in print."
