

#BeautifulNews: A simple question redirected Renier Coetzee's life

It took one question to change the course of Renier Coetzee's life: "How can I help?" While volunteering with churches and children's programmes, he saw the difficulties kids faced in the Cape Flats, from violence to inequality. After asking what role he could play, Coetzee gave up his intended career of becoming an actuary and decided to teach instead. "I believed I could make a bigger difference through this work," Coetzee says. By offering holistic education to kids in Mitchells Plain, he's unlocking their strength.
