

21 Icons Season 3 to feature Lucas Sithole on 27 September

"We all have our dreams. We all have our choices. But it's up to us if we wake up and chase our dreams or stick with our choices." - Lucas Sithole.

On 27 September 2015 on SABC 3 at 7:27pm, the acclaimed short-film series, 21 Icons, will feature the fourth icon of its third season: Paralympian wheelchair tennis player and South Africa's top quadriplegic wheelchair tennis champion, Lucas Sithole.

21 Icons traces South Africa's history over the course of its three seasons, moving from the fight for freedom to the country's growth during democracy, and concluding with a vision of the future. 21 Icons is a celebration of individuals who inspire multitudes through their impact, integrity and influence.

This season has been envisaged as a tribute to the country's future, shedding the spotlight on youth icons all under the age of 35. Their energy and drive has been captured in coloured portraits; a major departure from previous seasons which featured black-and-white fine arts portraits

Sithole has been selected for 21 Icons South Africa Season III to showcase that people can make the best of their situation if they are able to surpass adversity and strive to be the best version of themselves. Sithole is one of the faces of the Wheelchair Tennis South Africa organisation and optimistic about his role in society. He believes that by focusing on an end goal we can all have an impact on others and the world we live in. He is actively involved in promoting tennis to disabled people and advocating diversity in the sport and fights against stereotyping and intolerance of people with disabilities.

"I think if I wasn't disabled, and if God didn't give me this chair I wouldn't be a motivator to the youth and to other kids living with disability... I give them hope that there is a life in a wheelchair," he says.

During a portrait sitting, Sithole tells photographer Gary van Wyk how his life abruptly changed at age 12 when he was hit by a train in Dunhouser, KwaZulu-Natal. He lost both his legs and most of his right arm in the accident. However, this did not stop him from reaching for dreams and setting big goals. Despite being a triple amputee he set out to strive for greatness and has reached his goals.

The film gives an insightful and inspiring glimpse into South Africa's most successful and accomplished wheelchair tennis player. Sithole achieved in ten years what most athletes spend a lifetime working toward - becoming one of the top disabled athletes in the world and the first African to win a Grand Slam title.

For the portrait 'Against the Odds', which will appear on the same day his short-film is released, Van Wyk describes the visual elements, "Sithole is photographed on a tennis court, racquet in hand, seated in the chair that he has collected his numerous titles in. With his fierce stare to camera and his racquet poised for battle, the lines of the tennis court converge to form V's for 'Victory' at different angles, representing Sithole's personal and professional battle to become the best at what he does."

On the future of South Africa, he comments, "Everything is possible as long as you put your mind to it and you are ready to work hard for it."
