

#BeautifulNews: Uplifting the nation's youth through the universal language of theatre

Words can only do so much. And with 11 national languages in South Africa, communication sometimes holds people back. But our bodies have the power to express universal thoughts and emotions. That's why actress Jennie Reznick teaches theatre that focuses on physical expression. In a country where more than 50% of our youth is unemployed, she's committed to improving education, uplifting people, and creating understanding.
