

#BeautifulNews: This is my chance. Serving shots of opportunity after years of facing prejudice

Do you remember the search for your first job? Sending off your CV, hoping that your application would stand out, then waiting for days on end for a reply? For Kevin Boshoff, who has Down Syndrome, it was almost impossible to find employment. Being rejected from career opportunities can strip anyone of their dignity, self-esteem, and financial security. But Boshoff never gave up.

After three years of looking for work, he received a job at the Bean Tree Café in Platteklouf. With a smile on his face, Boshoff serves food and coffee and helps however he can. The restaurant has created a discrimination-free space where he can follow his aspirations. “The coffee shop is my life,” Boshoff says. “The coffee shop is my home.”

Read Kevin Boshoff's full story here.

For more, visit: <https://www.bizcommunity.com>