Beyers Truter, chairman and founder of the Pinotage Association, highlighted that Pinotage's quality is on the upsurge and that the market for wines made from this cultivar continues to grow. "Looking at the quality of wine from the 20 finalists this year, our winemakers are undoubtedly on the right course to grow Pinotage's popularity. Not only are they embracing the grape's unique characteristics and learning how to best treat it in the vineyard and in the cellar, but they are also determined to continue improving its quality and educating South African consumers and the rest of the world about the superb wine it produces."

Beyers said winemakers are now in sync with their terroir and that this is one of the most important ingredients of the success recipe.

Congratulating the finalists and winners, John Tshabalala, Absa's managing executive: Western Cape, says the group is proud to partner with the Pinotage Association in presenting these important and prestigious industry awards. "We wish all the trophy winners, as well as finalists, great success on their winemaking journey and hope they continue to prosper in local and international wine markets."
